A marriage license was granted in Ebensburg this week to Charles M. Weakland of Altoona and Nellie Miller of Everett.

The Woman's Circle of the Presbyterian Church will hold a Rummage Sale in the Shuck Building on Friday and Saturday of next week, September 29 and 30. On Saturday the special feature is a "market" of the kind famed for bargains. The public is cordially invited.

There are ten big acts presented in the Tompkins Show. They are riding acts, roping acts, Indian war dances, the sports and pastimes of the boys and girls of the plains, and other features usually found in a show of this kind. It is easily the largest amusement enterprise that ever played at the county fair, and one of the best of its kind to be found anywhere.

The big amusement feature of the Bedford County fair this year is the Tompkins Wild West Show, and the big feature of this show is Wild Spot, the "outlaw" broncho who has thrown over one hundred men. To anyone who will ride this animal Mr. Tompkins will pay $10; and while there have been a number of people making declarations of intentions around the grounds, none of them have been spending any of the Tompkins money up to the time of going to press.

During the runaway of the two-horse team belonging to Ross Diehl, Monday afternoon on Juliana, John and Richard Streets, Chester Banks of Everett, who is working at J. E. Disharoon's barge shop, proved himself quite a hero. While the horses were running at a very high speed, Banks climbed into the rear end of the wagon, then out on the pole between the two horses and mounted the one at the right and succeeded in stopping the team just in time to prevent a collision with a buggy in which Mrs. William Mock and daughter were driving.

More Honors For Dr. Smith

Dr. Gilbert T. Smith, who was appointed by the United States as Surgeon to the Alaska Boundary Survey Expedition into northern Alaska, has been honored by the Canadian authorities by appointment as Surgeon to the Dominion Line Survey. He has also been appointed Territorial Health Officer by the Yukon government.

The Doctor speaks highly of this magnificent country, which abounds in the finest of fishing and hunting. The streams are full of native greyling which resemble somewhat our trout in home waters, and in many respects are quite as game. There are plenty of caribou in the adjacent hills; they are now here in herds, and ptarmigan are seen everywhere, which have most beautiful plumage. Within easy reach to the north are Alaska Grizzly, polar bear and musk ox. The country is a hunter's paradise. The Doctor, who is fond of hunting and outdoor life, will remain throughout the winter, and will take advantage of the opportunity for securing some fine trophies.

INSTALLATION SERVICES

Held in Trinity Lutheran Church
Last Sunday.

Sunday, September 17, was a very pleasant day for the Lutherans of Bedford, it being the occasion of the installation of Rev. H. E. Wieand as pastor of the church. The day was ideal and the same seemed to characterize the services of the entire day.

The day opened with a Rally Service of the Sabbath School. The school gathered in the accustomed place and marched to the auditorium to the music of a march played on the organ by the excellent organist, Miss Grace Stewart.

A specially prepared Rally Service of song was carried out by the large chorus choir of the church. The music was of a moving nature and filled all with a new impulse.

Rev. Mr. Drawbaugh delivered a fervent address on the Responsibility in and to the Sabbath School, on the part of those not attending, though members of the church.

The pastor, in a short talk gave his announcement of the establishment of a Cradle Roll and the organization of a Home Department, Miss Maude Colvin in charge of the former and Miss Mame Fletcher, of the latter.

At 11 o'clock began the services of installation of the pastor. Rev. Wieand had charge of the morning service. Rev. D. P. Drawbaugh of Altoona and President of the Allegheny Synod, delivered the charge to the congregation. He forcibly and very plainly told the virtues and evils to be amended and avoided. He gave trip-hammer strokes which certainly should be effective, where same were and are needed. He held the attention of the large congregation for an hour.

In the evening the large congregation assembled, heard a most excellent message, in a charge to the Pastor, by Rev. Thomas Reich of Hollidaysburg on the theme, "Preach the Word." It was a masterful message, full of meat not only for the pastor, but for the people. With a pleasing presence and a strong message, the people found delight in the evening service.

This was followed with the propounding of questions, by the President of Synod, to the pastor and congregation, both vowing faithfulness for and in service of Christ and the church.

The music of the day was of the high order expected from the strong aggregation of singers, for which Trinity Lutheran is famous.

Mrs. Catherine Weaver

Mrs. Catherine Weaver died at her home in Puttstown Tuesday, September 12, aged 72 years, eight months and two days. She retired at 11 o'clock Monday night, September 11, and was found dead in bed early Tuesday morning, having died of heart failure.

Her maiden name was Morningstar and she was born in Little Valley, Huntingdon County. She was married to Isaac Reed who was killed in the battle of the Wilderness. Mrs. John Hollingshead of Huntingdon and Mrs. J. C. Stoler of Saxton are surviving children of this marriage. Samuel Weaver, her second husband, and their sons, Elmer, Charles and Albert Weaver, all of Saxton, survive. She was a member of the Church of God at Saxton for many years. She was a faithful wife, a kind neighbor, a devout believer and her sudden death has brought bereavement to many hearts. Funeral services were held Sunday morning and were conducted by her pastor, Rev. F. W. McGuire.

Registered as Law Student

On Friday last, Emory D. Claar of Bedford Township registered as a student at law in the office of Attorney B. F. Madore. He is a graduate of West Chester State Normal and is now pursuing his studies in the law department of the University of Pennsylvania, having completed the first year's work. Mr. Claar is the only student that has registered at the local bar since 1902.

Many were the compliments paid to the management and the various committees for the work they have done to make possible so satisfactory a fair. Today's crowd promises to be a record-breaker.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The Ninth District Held Annual Meeting in St. Clairsville Last Week.

The ninth annual convention of the Ninth District convened in St. Peter's Lutheran Church, St. Clairsville, on Thursday, September 14, with Rev. Levi Rodgers presiding. The session opened with music by the choir and devotional services were led by Rev. H. C. Salem. Address of Welcome was given by W. S. Otto; Response by Levi Roudabush. The usual committees were appointed and general business attended to. The treasurer's report shows good financial condition and the Secretary's the increase of two schools.

Afternoon session opened with an address on "What is the Most Important Preparation for Sunday School Work?" by Rev. E. A. G. Hermann. He said, "The teachers are developing the character of the nation. Then how necessary it is they be thoroughly prepared, intellectually and spiritually. We must reflect what we teach. We must live in the presence of the Master, if we would have our boys and girls develop Christlike characters." Rev. M. C. Fiegal emphasized the necessity of the teacher's knowing Christ. "We should come before the class thoroughly prepared. If we fail to bring them to Christ, we miss our aim." Rev. H. W. Bender spoke of the overwhelming importance of the spiritual preparation. W. S. Lysinger spoke of "The Teachers' Training." "The How and Why of the Home Department," Rev. H. W. Bender said, "It is a great work and keeps the church in touch with the home." On "The parents' attitude toward the Sunday School," P. A. Bender said "If the parents' attitude is right toward the Sunday School it will be toward all other religious truths." Rev. H. C. Salem said "It was of vital importance to the church. The children are going to follow their parents up or down." J. H. Stambaugh spoke of the mothers' work in connection with the school.

Evening session opened with Vice President F. K. Moses presiding. Devotional services were conducted by Rev. J. H. Zinn. "Character and the Teacher" was discussed by Revs. J. H. Zinn, H. C. Salem and J. W. Zehring. A Sunday School teacher's life should be beyond reproach. It is reproduced in the lives of the pupils. Then how important it should be a copy of the Master's.

Olive and Mary Salem sang "Jesus Loves Me." An address was given by Rev. D. N. Dittmar on "The Teacher's Work and Reward, Whom They Are to Teach and How." We are coming to know their proper place in the church, next to the minister. They are to prepare themselves to teach men and women, as well as boys and girls. What are we to teach? The lesson of His love. The everlasting love of God is the essence of His word. How step by step he is leading his people, that is what we are to teach and learn. There is no place so honorable as the Sunday School teacher's, helping in the revelation of God's word. The reward: God is holding them out all the time. It's something to have the sweet consciousness of helping somebody. The consciousness of duty nobly done. One of the rewards is the love of the Sunday School scholars. The other up yonder, when the Master shall say, well done—you are co-laborers with God. Only eternity will reveal the work done.

The music by the choir was appropriate and excellent and the refreshments fine. The apples presented to each guest by Albert Otto were not only beautiful but good. "That little touch of sympathy which makes all the world akin" seemed to run through the convention from the welcome address by W. S. Otto to the last amen by Rev. D. N. Dittmar.

The ninth annual convention will live in our memories and be an inspiration to us while our heads are warm and our hearts beat.

MARKETING APPLES

A Substantial Advance in Price May Be Secured on

BEDFORD COUNTY APPLES

If They Are Honestly and Carefully Packed—Accurate Labeling Essential to Successful Marketing.

For several years I have spent a part of the winter in Philadelphia studying the marketing of apples. Last winter I was there over five weeks doing nothing else. I had supervision, also, of the marketing of nine carloads of apples last year; and the history of this operation is important to us all.

Over three hundred carloads of apples, not less than 50,000 barrels, were shipped out of Bedford County last winter. With better marketing methods the growers would have realized not less than $1.50 per barrel more than they did; thereby adding $75,000 to the permanent capital of Bedford County.

Because of the economic importance of this matter I am writing of it in some detail; and this article will be the first of several.

So far as I know no one else has ever tried to make a study of the marketing of our apples, except some of the buyers; and their study has not led to anything better than methods already in use by some growers. Buyers still continue to commit the unpardonable sin of shipping apples in bulk, and of shipping in but two grades where they barrel.

The nine carloads, marketing of which I supervised, may be divided into four, packing and shipping of which I supervised, and five which were packed without my supervision. On the former a very handsome profit was obtained over the best price offered for them by apple buyers; on the latter a net loss was made, though that is in part accounted for by the high price paid for the apples, from 80c to 90c a bushel. However, they did not bring anything like the price of the apples packed under my direction. A description of the two processes of packing and shipping will help to explain this difference.

Nearly all of the barrels packed under my direction had a label pasted on them, the label stating that they were packed "Solid to Size," and being fathered by the name of the Fruit Shippers' Association. On this label the name and grade of the apple was neatly filled in with a rubber stamp. The facing I did myself. The apples in the middles of the barrel held up in size with the facers; in fact the very largest apples were put into the middle of the barrel. The packing was careful and strictly honest. Three grades were made, and great care was taken to have uniform sizes in each barrel. Apples running from 2 1/4 inches down were labelled as "Hotel Grade," and, while they were small, it was surprising to see what a very good appearance they made when unmixed with larger sizes. They brought about 75c a barrel less than the best. Fancy apples shipped. Had sizes been mixed, all would have brought the lower price. Apples badly stung or fungus marked and those showing signs of rot were carefully removed; only sound apples were shipped.

The five carloads, not packed under my direction, were quite a different matter. The facing was carelessly done, blossom and stem ends being mixed together in the face, and fungus marked, wormy or partly rotten apples often showing in the facers. Every barrel contained apples that should have been rejected in almost all of the barrels the middle of the barrel was filled with much smaller apples than the face showed (a very common but short-sighted practice), barrel after barrel of apples that had been frozen and thawed were shipped; and these apples hardly averaged 60c a bushel for the shipper at a time when strictly first-class apples of the same kind were bringing nearly $1.50 per bushel net. That is the pitiful part of it. If the shippers had only used a little judgment and care, they might have realized a

$3.50 RECIPE FREE, FOR WEAK MEN

Send Name and Address Today—You Can Have it Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, falling memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men and I am convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow man to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest-acting restorative, upbuilding, SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 3584 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free.

handsome profit, instead of a loss.

Mr. Drew, the most successful orchardist of the east, has said that the shortest road to disaster in orcharding is dishonesty. And he might have added that carelessness is a kind of constructive dishonesty.

The apples packed and shipped under my direction held their place with the very best in appearance and more than that in honest packing. The other five carloads were very properly called by our Commission Man "plunder." They were the worst along the street while they were being marketed, through inexcusable carelessness.

Well, there ought to be a lesson in this. Are we going to be able to realize the prophecy of "A dollar a bushel in the orchard?" We are going to do better than that. But we will have to do honest, careful packing of apples that are fit to ship; and we will have to modify somewhat our system of keeping apples. Of this I will write later.

Mr. Holden told me, just before I left Philadelphia, that he would not have thought it possible to make a reputation such as we did on the few carloads of labelled fruit. The honest packing with the label guaranteeing it took the market by storm. It was a very short storm, for we had but few apples; but it has left its mark. There is not a clean man on Dock Street who would not jump at the chance of handling our labelled fruit. I had many requests to be allowed to do this; and many compliments from Commission men on the beauty and honest packing of the labelled fruit. We have only started on this work. We are going to stick to this plan, and win out, because the market is ripe for such work. How do I know this? Not from what the wholesale men told me. I went among the retailers. Talked with about seventy-five men who retail apples; told them of our method of packing, the same size of sound apples in the middles of the barrel as we show in the face, and asked them what they would pay for apples packed so, what premium or bonus. Usually the answer was that they would gladly pay $1.50 a barrel premium for a guaranteed pack; some of them said they would pay $1 extra, and one (a Scotchman with broad Gaelic) said he would pay 50c extra.

Ultimately we can build up a direct trade with such people; for the present we can well afford to work through a clean commission house; and we will pick up this winter many extra dollars by letting our good sense keep us in the path of strict honesty.

On the four cars packed under my direction the growers extra profit, over what the buyers offered, was from 30 to 60c per bushel.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

HECKERMAN LETTER

With Bared Head Salesman Views Gorgeous Sunset.

Toledo, O., September 16, 1911. Some days ago I saw a sunset such as never before. 'Twas the most gorgeous sight I ever beheld and no doubt thousands of others may have seen the same. It was a very peculiar sunset; even the pedestrian wondered at the strange golden tint of the buildings; it made golden even the atmosphere, and it was a beautiful sight to him who stood on an eminence with bared head—the strange yet lovely scene, or, I might say, lovely cloud. It was so gorgeous that it produced over me a feeling of awe. I saw it about half past six. Suddenly a greenish yellow light filled the streets; when again reflected from the pavement everything, even the persons employed there, partook of the hue, probably from the dust that was floating around. But over the whole sky, with its crimson, pink, salmon, yellow and blue effects, there was a prevailing hue of gold that tinted the edges of the clouds and gave the atmosphere its yellow appearance. Suddenly, however, the gorgeous coloring vanished. Then the most beautiful rainbow appeared and lasted for a long time. I never saw anything so beautiful in all my life.

I came here from Pittsburg with some friends to investigate a machine where electricity is used to force vegetation, or make vegetables grow quickly. I can't tell you of it; it would be too long, but I wished for all my friends to see that acre of wires overhead and underground and note the rapidity of the growth of melons, corn, tomatoes, etc. Now, there; you tell that fellow to stop laughing, for when the company is formed and Levi Smith's asparagus shoots up two feet high in two nights there'll not be a doubting Thomas any longer.

During the past few years conditions in all lines of business, not only the agricultural end of it, but professional life, has changed so completely that in order to win success he or they must specialize and learn to do some one thing and do it well. So it is with any new article sold or shown to the people. It must have genuine merit or no amount of chin music or advertising will maintain the demand for the article. Yours truly, M. P. Heckerman.

Free Fruit at the Land Show

The fruit growers of Oregon have arranged, through the Oregon Development League of Portland, to send a car load of Oregon apples to the Pittsburgh Land Show next month for free distribution to visitors there. The railroads will give this car free transportation from the Pacific slope. West Virginia and Maryland will also have fine fruit displays in this show, and it is likely that the growers of West Virginia will imitate the example of Oregon in providing a large quantity of apple to be used as free gifts to visitors.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS

Gettysburg College Opens With Increased Enrollment.

Gettysburg, September 13.—The 79th academic year of Gettysburg College opened today with formal exercises in Brua Chapel conducted by the President, Dr. W. A. Granville. The Registrar reports an increased enrollment and from every indication the coming school year will be the greatest in the history of the institution. The faculty has been strengthened by the addition of Prof. R. S. Kirby from Yale University who takes charge of the Engineering Departments and by Prof. B. F. Schappelle from the University of Pennsylvania in the Department of French and Spanish.

The new concrete walk in front of the Old Dormitory, given by the Class of 1906, is now finished. All the College buildings have been thoroughly renovated and the campus greatly beautified. Dr. Huber, late Professor of English Bible in the College, bequeathed to the College a very valuable collection of over 2,000 volumes, and Prof. Harold Lewars has donated a number of important reference books for the use of the Department of English Literature. Every department is fully equipped for the highest grade of instruction. Coach Vail reports encouraging prospects for the various athletic teams.

OLD SAMOAN MATS.

Precious Heirlooms That Are Treasured by the Natives.

Among the curious customs of the Samoans is that of making heirlooms of mats. By some simple process of reasoning the mat has come to be identified with the family, as the hearthstone is traditionally sacred among the Saxon race.

The Samoan mats are really fine specimens of art. The people esteem them much more highly than any article of European manufacture, and the older they are the more they are regarded. Some of them have names known all over the Samoan group. The oldest is called Moe-e Fui-Fui, or "The man that slept among the creepers." It got this title by reason of the fact that it had been hidden away for years among the creeping convolvulus that grows wild along the seashore. It is known to be 200 years old, as the names of its owners during that period can be traced.

The possession of one of these old mats gives the owner great power—in fact, it is a title deed to rank and property, from the Samoan standpoint, says Harper's Weekly. It is no matter if the mats are tattered and worn out. Their antiquity is their value, and for some of the most cherished of them large sums of money would be refused.

AN ALBATROSS IN FLIGHT.

The Camera Caught a Motion the Eye Could Not Discern.

An interesting application of photography to settle a disputed point in natural history was made by a naturalist on a voyage from British Columbia to San Francisco.

A large albatross had been following the steamer and keeping pace with it for several hours, and the wonder grew among the watchers on board the ship as to how the bird was able to fly so swiftly while apparently keeping its wings extended without flapping them. As this is a common method of flight with the albatross, the explanation used to be offered that the bird took advantage of slight winds and air currents and was so able to glide upon what might be called atmospheric slopes.

As the albatross sailed alongside the ship, about fifteen feet away, the naturalist snapped his camera at it and obtained a photograph that astonished him and his fellow passengers.

The photograph revealed, what no eye had caught, the wings of the albatross, each some five feet long, raised high above its back, in the act of making a downward stroke. The explanation naturally suggested was that more or less frequently the bird must have made a stroke of this kind with its wings, although the eye could not detect the motion, and that the camera happened to be snapped at just the right moment.—Boston Globe.

Ancient Greeks Had Trades.

In the days of their greatest prosperity the Greeks probably excelled all other nations in the variety and excellence of their manufactures. Their sons were often the great scientists of their age, for Thales of Miletus, one of the "seven wise men of antiquity," was an old merchant; Socrates was a stone mason, who, like Hugh Miller, left the quarry and bench to become the teacher of nobles; Aristotle compounded drugs while trying to solve his "problems," apparently proposed by other tradesmen, artists, musicians, architects and engineers; Plato and Solon had callings as well as studies and political activities. So, too, all were soldiers, and few men in Athens failed to take their places in the phalanx or galley when Athens called on her sons to battle.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

THE MOLT.

If robins and wrens lost all their feathers at once, wouldn't pussy get lots of bird breakfasts?

But who has seen Mrs. Robin in the nude like some old rude mammy hens, who seem to have no respect for the conventional? Take those pullets. Perhaps you are surprised to know that pullets molt four times before laying, their new feathers follow the old so quickly as to escape notice and, if their first egg is not laid before Sept. 1, they do not normally molt again for a year.

Hens should molt birdlike, but old fannies disrobe quick, weak hens slow.

POULTRY WANTS A DRESS.

and both, like human hens, take a long time to dress. Look at Polly. He's too clumsy.

Like Biddies with fat bustles, he has had too much carbohydrates and little protein, and so has no nitrogen to make feathers. He needs less seed and more boiled meat in his system.

When normal hens molt in warm weather, yearlings molting in about eighty-five days, two and three year old hens molting in 100 to 105 days.

Heavy laying isn't natural; it's against fertility and throws a hen off her molt, so that heaviest layers generally molt last, though quickest, and thus early winter eggs are lost. It is wise to discourage heavy laying toward end of cheap egg season, to turn hens on the green, to let them loaf in shade and to remove those Biddy bustles with antifat.

Hens thus become normal for the ordeal, and with a ration rich in protein for nitrogen for feathers and some oil to furnish heat for their bodies they molt naturally and for future profit.

Meat, oilmeal, gluten, sunflower seed, clover, alfalfa, the grains and byproducts, make up the rational ration for molt, and it should be remembered what hens lose before and at time of molt they must gain before laying again.

DON'TS.

Don't feed egg force to pullets and molting hens.

Don't forget that filth is the red mites' incubator.

Don't fail to cure and store clover, the great egg maker.

Don't bury dead fowls in the hen yard. Use them for grapevine fertilizer.

Don't feed much new wheat at a meal. It affects hens as new hay does the horse.

Don't advertise a colossal business with only a back lot coop full of culls to back it.

Don't let droppings accumulate under roosts in summer with the idea that because they dry up they are not injurious.

Don't ridicule bald heads. Remember that when children to Elsha said, "Go up, go up, thou old bald head!" the bears came roaring from the wood and used those kids for breakfast food.

TO A CRYSTAL SPRING.

I sing of a spring
On the farm in the hills,
Whose waters, so pure and so cold,
Trickle up through the rocks,
Then to singing in rills
Through green meadows and wheat
Fields of gold

How the larks carol there,
Where the wild roses fair
Draw their life from thy pure, limpid
Cool.

And the thrush from the tree
Sings an anthem to thee,
Crystal spring, purling water so cool.

There the cows and the sheep,
Standing in grasses deep,
Edw. their heads to thy life giving rill,
And the boy, whistling gay
From the field far away,
Comes to thee his brown jug to fill.

Oh, the lingering sips
That I took with my lips
As I dipped my hot face in thy cool!
And how often the time
That I dropped down a line
To ensnare the sly trout in thy pool.

Thirsty fowls of the air
As they quaff sweet drink there
Raise their eyes full of thanks to the blue.

Wearily pilgrims that pass
As they kneel in the grass
Praise their Maker, oh, cool spring for you.

C. M. BARNITZ.

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS

Q. Why is it solid colored fowls are the favorites at big plants? I see no spangled nor laced birds at any of them. A. Because the spangled and laced varieties are bred for beauty, nearly all require double mating, and practical poultry men haven't time to fool on fancy feathers, but are after eggs and meat, which butterfly birds can't furnish.

Q. I should like to raise Wyandottes that lay a deep brown egg and wish you to tell me how. A. Fowls that lay colored eggs generally lay different shades, some shells running nearly white. This is because they do not secrete the same amount of pigment at all times nor put the same amount into every shell. To get an egg that is rich brown every time is hardly possible, but by selecting and hatching only dark eggs and breeding from their hatch for several years you may get there.

Q. My chicks seem to have rheumatism. They are on dry board floors by day and sleep in warm indoor brooders by night and haven't been forced for growth. Please suggest a cure. A. The best cure for your chicks is to get them out on to the damp earth. After chicks are on dry floors for four or five weeks the juices in their legs seem to dry up. This is especially the case where the brooder nursery is heated by a lamp under the floor.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Sandy soil is best for poultry runs. This soil affords best sanitary conditions, and on it hen health is promoted. If your location does not afford natural drainage, artificial should be applied.

When a cluck is off the nest and blowflies settle on her eggs you may be sure she is sitting on some rots. Rots often leak through the shell pores and, like bad company, spoil the good eggs around them.

Merchants who handle cold storage eggs often have nonreturnable egg cases in large quantities for sale in the spring. These may be bought low and only need new cardboard cells to make them O. K. for use.

Two great essentials to poultry success are cheap grain and greens, and the fancier who raises his own has a cluck on the fellow who must buy everything he feeds. He is independent of market fluctuations, and his fowls flourish on free range and sound, fresh feed.

When things all seem to go wrong with you and you get so mad you are bound to swear at somebody, then swear at the phonograph, and when it has taken your record sit down and let the machine blow your cuss words back at you. That will reform any mule.

Chicken feathers are now largely taking the place of bird plumage on the hats of fair women. White Holland turkey tails furnish the largest feathers. Most of them are dyed. Barred Rock feathers from breast, wings and tails are latest for muffs, boas and hats.

Laying capacity varies much among individual hens. A test shows some laying 200 a year and others none. When trapped at a fancier is often surprised to find the hens he considered his best layers are his worst drones. Tripnests are cheap. Better buy and test out the deadbeats.

Like Mary's lamb, a pet goose twenty-five years old followed Kathleen Alworth to a New York school and, unlike the little sheep, was admitted and was used for a nature study. Geese certainly have strong likes and dislikes, and the feathered rubber-necks, unlike the human, are very interesting.

White Rock breeders have registered a kick at the picture of the Rock cock bird in the new Standard. The tail is bungled badly. The artist who got $50 for the job, as usual blames it on the printer. The association should appoint a committee from its prominent rooster faker tail grafters to finish the job.

While the storage trust is expert on figures and is certain of a big demand for eggs the winter through, when it comes to figure on the natural supply, there's the rub. To illustrate, the last week of February, 1910, 60,000 cases of fresh eggs were received in New York, while in the same week of February, 1911, 116,340 cases were shipped in.

DECISION SHORTENS TERMS

County and Borough Officials Affected if Lower Court is Sustained.

According to George D. Thorn, chief clerk of the State Department at Harrisburg and an authority on election matters, if the decision of Judge L. L. Davis of Allegheny County, in the case of the so-called McKeesport "ripper" bill is sustained by the higher courts, it will deprive hundreds of municipal and county officers throughout the state of extensions of terms the recent Legislature endeavored to grant them. He says:

"The decision of Judge Davis is far-reaching and affects more public officers than any decision that has been made for many years past. The decision wipes off the statute books the so-called 'Alter act,' which provided for the extension of terms of officers not provided for by the schedule to the amendments adopted in 1909. This includes all Justices of the Peace and Aldermen elected in 1907, and also borough and township officers elected for three-year terms in 1909. All these officers will serve only until the end of the term for which they were elected, which is the first Monday in March or April or May, 1912, as the case may be.

"Under the Alter bill these officers were continued in office until the first Monday in January, 1914.

"All county officers elected in 1909 are in the same position, and, instead of serving four years, will serve but three, and vacancies will occur at the end of the three years for which they were elected, which will be filled by appointment."

THURSDAY MORNING, SEP. 21, '11
ONE HUNDRED SIXTH YEAR

With this issue The Gazette enters upon its one hundred sixth year, hale and hearty, still leading the other papers of the county in circulation and retaining the first place as an advertising medium.
For one hundred five complete years The Gazette has lived in Bedford without change in name or political complexion, and during this time it has numbered among its editors men of marked ability; men who have risen into greater than merely local prominence.
But three of the former editors of the paper are now living. Hon. B. F. Meyers, the venerable editor of the Star-Independent, Harrisburg, who, though broken in body, still possesses an active mind and daily writes the sparkling "Snap Shots" for his paper. He, like The Gazette, still clings to the doctrines of Democracy. The other two are Lieutenant Governor John M. Reynolds of East St. Clair Township and Hon. Robert C. McNamara of Bedford. The latter of these still clings to the harriards of Democracy's banner, while the former drew anchor and sailed into other waters.
From the time when Charles McDowell came to Bedford with his hand outfit, in September 1805, and started the Bedford Gazette, her progress has been onward, and she is in the lead. She has, of course, had many obstacles to surmount but she has not swerved from the path of duty. Proposals and threats alike have been thrust aside and even the work of the Legislative machinery of the state, manipulated by machine hands, failed to accomplish the desired end. She still lives and leads and is free.
WEIGH THE CANDIDATES
The primary election, at which candidates will be chosen by the different parties to fill the several places on the ticket, is but a few days off, hence it is time for the voters to consider the course to pursue when they enter the booths on September 30.
For some of the offices the Democratic voters will have to choose between men who have announced for the places. Weigh the matter well, cast aside for the time being everything else and consider the one question, "Which of the several men who have announced for a particular office is best fitted to serve the county in that capacity?"
Character, Democrats, is the first essential, for it embraces honesty and integrity in officials, as in men, and they who possess it may be depended upon to serve the people and not merely their party, neither will they wear the collar of any boss, if they have the courage of their convictions, and if they do not have they should not hold public office.
But ability to do the work of the office must also enter prominently into the consideration of candidates, for a man who is not qualified to fill the office he seeks, however clean his record and pure his intentions should not be entrusted with official duties.
Figuratively speaking a candidate to merit support should have "backbone"—a will of his own; a will strong enough to enable him to resist the temptations that may be brought to bear.
"The riches of a commonwealth are free, strong minds and hearts of health."
Be careful how you vote; weigh justly the claims of all candidates and the ticket you nominate will be a credit to the party and if elected an honor to the county.

Candidate for the Democratic, Keystone and Prohibition Nomination for County Treasurer, Presents His Claims.

To Voters of Bedford County:
I am a candidate for the nomination for the office of County Treasurer on the Democratic, Keystone and Prohibition tickets. Owing to the demands of business and the advanced stage of the campaign I shall be unable to call upon the voters personally and make their acquaintance, hence I am impelled to write this open letter to the public in the interest of my candidacy. It goes without saying that I should certainly like to have the vote and influence of every voter in the county who favors the principles I stand for at the Primary Election to be held Saturday, September 30, 1911, and am anxious to receive the nomination on the Fusion ticket.

JOHN C. NICHOLSON
It would ill become me to say much of myself or of my availability or fitness for the position to which I aspire. Of this you, the voters of Bedford County, must decide after considering my claims as well as the claims of my competitors, most of whom doubtless have made a more or less general canvass of the voters of the various districts of the county. I have naught to say to detract from the character and standing of any of these gentlemen. They are all known to a greater or less extent throughout the county while I am not generally known personally in many parts thereof.
Just here a word as to my not being personally known through the county, my obscurity if you please. Other things being right this is no valid objection or disqualification. When Grover Cleveland was first nominated as a candidate for the Presidency the query quickly became rife everywhere, "Who is Cleveland?" Such splendid progressive men as Wilson of New Jersey and La Follette of Wisconsin a few years ago were men of merely a local reputation in their home communities. Today they have a nation-wide fame.
A few years ago George W. Derrick was locally known as a trusted employe of the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad. Today he stands the exemplar of manhood in business and in politics. When Dewey's guns shook Manila Bay and put out of commission the boastful Spaniards' fleet J. W. Huff was a man of local prominence in his home section. Today he is honored and respected for his integrity by both friend and foe. Obscurity doesn't mean so much. If the public at large does not know me there are men of just prominence in the county who do know me. Of many such I may name, without their permission either expressed or implied, E. M. Pennell, Esq., Moses Lippel and former County Treasurer S. A. Cessna, all of Bedford. They do know me. Inquire of them as to this little-known candidate from the Broad Top coal region.

Born in Saltito, Huntingdon County, December the 3rd, 1849, I came to Riddlesburg May 26th, 1886, where I accepted a clerkship in the large general store of the late W. C. Ashoon, with whom I remained until July 20th, 1890, when I accepted a clerkship in the store of Sweet & Brown, coal operators at Defiance, filling the office of Assistant Postmaster during the period of my stay there.
On September 20th, 1892, I removed to Coaldale, where now I am, and engaged in the general store business, later receiving the appointment of Postmaster of Six Mile Run under the second Cleveland administration. Previous to the year 1886 I was engaged in teaching in the public schools of Fulton, Huntingdon and Blair Counties.
My training and my life work, therefore, may be rightly regarded as naturally tending to fit me to discharge the duties of the office of County Treasurer with fidelity to the public and credit to myself.
Now a member of the Coaldale Methodist Episcopal Church and President of its Board of Trustees, I have been identified with church and Sunday School work both before and since I came into the county.
Owing to a large Republican majority in the Borough of Coaldale I have held but one elective office therein, that of School Director at the present time.
Although a Democrat, yet I have always warmly supported the Fusion movement in the county and regard the success thereof in former campaigns as having given to the people of the county men of character, ability and probity to fill the various county offices to which they were elected. This is natural, for faithful and efficient performance of public duty almost invariably follows when the people themselves choose their officers from the brain and brawn of the county instead of having men foisted into office whose only recommendation is that they can be relied upon to do the bidding of the bosses.
There is evident a desire on the part of the public to ascertain the predilections of the various candidates for office on the "drink question." In response to such proper wish I may say that I have ever been unalterably opposed to the traffic in intoxicating drinks, because of the untold evils arising from the sale and use thereof. I, of course, sanction with all my soul the "Touch not, taste not, handle not" rule; strictly, rigidly practicing it in my own life and encouraging its observance by others.
Now, fellow voters of Bedford County, you have before you in the foregoing statement some knowledge of my principles and views on public matters. To have said less would have been unfair to you who have a right to know, and now to your decision I entrust my candidacy whether for weal or woe.
I am sincerely yours,
JOHN C. NICHOLSON.

Civil War Veteran and Noted Physician Asks Support of

THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS

Of the County in His Candidacy for the Nomination for the Office of Sheriff.

The following sketch is taken from volume II of The Progressive Men of Pennsylvania:
Americus Enfield, M. D., one of the most progressive physicians as well as medical reformers of this state, was born near the town of Salisbury, Somerset County, on April 7, 1847, and is therefore 64 years of age. He is of English and Irish descent, and is the father of six children, three boys and three girls, namely: Dr. W. F. of Bedford, Charles Lee Carall of Pittsburgh, Milton, manager of the Bell Telephone Company, of Bedford, and three daughters at home.
Dr. Enfield is a graduate of Mercersburg College in his literary attainments, and a graduate of Bellevue Hospital Medical College, N. Y., and the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia in his Medical degrees.

DR. AMERICUS ENFIELD
While first at college the war broke out, and at the age of 16 the spirit of patriotism fired his heart and he enlisted early in the war in Knapp's Battery in defence of the Union. Later he re-enlisted in the cavalry and served six months after the close of the war being mustered October 31, 1865.
After graduating in medicine he located in Cumberland, then in Clearville, this county, from which place he was elected Sheriff in 1882. He was the last Democrat elected Sheriff of Bedford County, and had a very large majority.
The Doctor voted for George B. McClellan for President in the field before he was of age, and he has, with few exceptions, voted that ticket to the present day. He has been a delegate to many county and state conventions.
In 1896 he was honored by being chosen a delegate to the National Convention in which he took a most conspicuous part from the beginning to the end. He led the opposition to the unit rule and proclaimed his preference for William Jennings Bryan.
In 1884 he was unanimously nominated for Congress and cut the Republican majority down by more than five thousand. In 1898 he was again a candidate for Congress, having the delegates from two out of the four counties, and after 129 ballots he withdrew.
About 15 years ago he conceived the brilliant idea of curing obstinate cases of stomach trouble by mechanical means and proceeded to invent, improve and perfect implements by which he inserts a brush into the stomach and with the brush and sprayer he removes the substances which clog up the digestive track and has personally treated thousands of cases from almost every state in the Union, but on account of the intense application he is now compelled to make a change and take a rest. His great invention brought his name before the whole world and it was noted by the entire press of America and by many leading journals and newspapers of the Old World. And he treasures many letters and personal notices of the most prominent medical men of this and other countries. He is a man of wonderful energy and magnetic personality.
He has revolutionized the treatment of stomach troubles over the entire world and gave all his inventions, without a cent of profit, for the benefit of suffering humanity and his treatment is now used over the entire globe.
While he is yet active in mind and body he feels he must take a change and a rest, and as no candidate appeared he offers himself as the only Democratic candidate for Sheriff of Bedford County.
His many personal excellences have added immensely to his popularity and he is perhaps the best known man in Bedford County and is well spoken of by the best men of both parties. His character and morals are refined and Christian. He and his children are all members of the Reformed Church, while his wife is a member of the Lutheran. He is a man of absolute honesty and integrity, and filled the office of Sheriff from 1882 to 1885 with fidelity to the people and with honor to the court.
Dr. Enfield will not make a canvass for the nomination, but if nominated he will make a vigorous and active campaign for the election. He is a ready and able speaker and has filled many engagements in this and other states.
As a member of the Grand Army he is frequently called on to fire the old boys in blue. He has always stood at the forefront in every movement to advance the moral and physical welfare of Bedford County, and if nominated his election is predicted by a large majority.

Confidence

By F. TOWNSEND SMITH

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I never wear a ring--few men do nowadays--but if I were inclined to do so there is an incident in my life that would prevent it. I was visiting my friends Mr. and Mrs. Jim Peabody at their country place. Another guest was Miss Virginia Wotherspoon, to whom I had taken a desperate fancy. One afternoon after a game of tennis I went into the bathroom on the floor where my room was located for a bath, and on the marble basin I saw a ring set with four large diamonds, which I recognized at once as one I had seen on the finger of Miss Wotherspoon. I took it to my room, intending to hand it to her when we met at dinner. Jim called me to his room to tell me about some amusements he was arranging, and I left the ring on the mantel in my room. He kept me half an hour, and when I returned the ring was gone.

I was liable to be considered a thief and of having appropriated to myself the property of a girl to whom I had already given the biggest part of my heart. I was sufficiently cool to think before acting. What would be the safest course for me to pursue? While weighing the pros and cons of different courses dinner was announced.

I once knew a very successful man who said, reversing a common adage, "I never do today what I can put off till tomorrow." I was much impressed with the idea, and rather than decide hastily in this instance I concluded to defer decision till after dinner.

I decided dead wrong. I should have brought the matter out at once. While I had been in Jim's room the housekeeper had gone into mine to leave some towels and had seen the ring on my mantel. Miss Wotherspoon missed it and ran to the bathroom. Not finding her property, she made her loss known to the hostess. The hostess communicated with the housekeeper, who said she had seen the ring on my mantel. Had I, on going down to dinner, made the facts known my story would have been believed. But, not saying a word about the matter, it all looked very singular to my friends. Nothing was said about Miss Wotherspoon's loss, and at first there was no constraint at the board, but before the dinner was finished I noticed a considerable coolness toward me on the part of every one.

Knowing well the cause and beginning to realize the position I was in, I grew embarrassed. I saw that I had made a mistake all around and did not see any way to vindicate myself. I did not know that the ring had been seen in my room, but it was plain to me that my connection with it was in some form known. I had but one theory as to the disappearance of the property--that some one, probably a servant, had gone into my room and, seeing the ring there, had stolen it.

After dinner I took Jim aside and told him the whole story. He looked very serious. He said that he didn't doubt a word of what I had told him, but he didn't see how we were to convince the women of the family. "They don't take the same views of things that we do," he said. "They judge in accordance with their feelings. That's the reason we men don't let them into the jury box. The main trouble in this case is that all our servants have been with us a long while, and, although we have left valuables where they could have been easily stolen without detection, we have never missed anything. But I'll do the best I can for you."

You never know what different views different persons will take of a mystery in which you are implicated until you are the subject of it. The only person in that whole household who thoroughly believed my story was--who?

I'll tell you. After talking with Jim I went out for a walk in order to leave him to tell my story to the others and to get quieted down. When I returned no one was about, but on going into the drawing room Miss Wotherspoon advanced, and putting out her hand and fixing her honest eyes on mine, said: "I have heard your explanation and have not the slightest doubt that every word of it is absolutely true."

By Jove! What do you suppose I did? I opened the sprinkler in my eyes.

Pretty soon I went up to Jim's room to tell him the good news. He listened to me, but without that enthusiasm I had expected. When I had finished he said:

"We must find the thief. That's the only way to exonerate you. I told you that women are prone to decide such questions in accordance with their feelings. I am not surprised at Miss Wotherspoon's action, for both my wife and I have noticed a decided partiality on her part for you."

"Thank God for that!"

"My wife is more unprejudiced. I wish her to feel perfectly satisfied in the matter and shall take measures to discover the thief."

I left the next day under a cloud--at least with Mrs. Peabody. Six months from that time the thief had not been discovered. Miss Wotherspoon and I were married, but Jim and his wife were not invited to the wedding. In another six months the thief turned up in a servant to whom they gave a confidence they denied me. They tried hard to wipe off the slate, but I have never had anything to do with them since.

Dibert Brothers are in the valley doing carpenter work. Last week while raising a shed frame in front of Irvin Zembower's barn the men narrowly escaped a serious accident. The frame got overbalanced and fell, pinning Grant Dibert and John Debaugh down, and had it not been for a heavy trestle, it would, in all probability, have broken the legs of both men. The trestle also caused the frame to slide out, which would have caught six or more men against the barn which would have injured them seriously, had it not been checked. Andy Miller was on the top of the frame and was thrown against the barn but was not seriously hurt.

After every struggle resulting in a change of government there are scores to be paid off by those who have revolted. As revolutionists, instead of being favored by the law they have been hampered by it. Having established themselves in power, the other edge of the sword is brought into play and cuts in the opposite direction. Instead of being used to imprison or execute revolutionists it is used to execute the advocates of the government overthrown.

When the recent revolution in Mexico became the de facto government the revolutionists stood ready to use the law to punish those who had used it to punish them. During that period when President Diaz held his own in the city of Mexico a young lawyer, Alfonso Fernandez, a sympathizer with the insurgents, left the city to join the forces of Madero. During the fighting he was captured by the government troops, and, being a man of influence, every effort was made to induce him to return to the support of President Diaz. He was turned over to one Jose Sierra, a man deeply interested in putting down the rebellion, with orders to persuade, force or buy him to the government support.

Sierra took the captive to his hacienda, put him on his parole not to leave it and treated him like a guest instead of a prisoner. The jailer host was an adept at winning over an enemy and used every art of persuasion that suggested itself to him.

Concia, Sierra's daughter, a girl of twenty, possessed one of those oval faces of a dusky shade, large liquid eyes and especially the long lashes of the Spaniard. Her father noticed soon after Fernandez's arrival that he was attracted by his daughter and she was attracted by Fernandez. It occurred to Sierra that Fernandez's conversion might be accomplished more readily by means of the girl than by his own arguments or threats. He gave the young people every opportunity to be together and when he saw that the pear was ripe undertook to pluck it.

He offered Fernandez a prominent position under the government, which, of course, would be tantamount to securing his adherence. Fernandez declined the offer. Then Sierra informed his prisoner that he would be tried for treason, which meant that he would be found guilty and executed. In love with the daughter of the man who had made the threat, the temptation to yield and desert the cause in which he had embarked was well nigh irresistible.

Fernandez seemed to have everything to gain by giving his adherence to the established government. President Diaz then appeared to be firmly fixed in the presidency, and it would be difficult to unseat him. By yielding Fernandez would acquire a position of prominence that might be permanent. That position he might make more enduring and more prominent by throwing his influence on the side of the man who had done much for Mexico. These arguments were reinforced by the fact that on one side stood death, on the other love. But honor forbade.

Fernandez now considered the parole he had given and began to take measures to escape if possible. Concia procured for him a woman's dress and drove him in her volante past guards who had orders to be watchful and on no account permit his escape. Had it not been that she accompanied him he would not have succeeded in deceiving them. As it was, he made good his escape and returned to Mexico City.

Not even Sierra knew how Fernandez got beyond his clutches. Concia kept her secret, and directly after the escape changes occurred that rendered the episode a thing of the past and soon to be forgotten.

After Diaz's departure and the appointment of a provisional president of the republic the work of retaliation commenced. Jose Sierra, who had been captured by the revolutionists, was brought to the capital. To accuse a man of treason against a government that was not established when the act was committed would not come with good grace from the government that had been in rebellion. Those whom Sierra had made to suffer brought him to trial for having murdered a man whom he had shot during the struggle.

And so it was that the law which had before enabled Sierra to punish now afforded the same machinery for punishing him. As to his having ordered shot the man he was accused of murdering, there was no denying the fact. That he had done the deed legally did not concern the jurymen who were on the other side. The trial, therefore, was merely a judicial revenge, and a verdict of guilty was rendered accordingly.

The jury, the lawyers, the spectators, saw nothing but the bare facts of the trial that have been here outlined. To these persons in the courtroom there was far more than this. They were the judge before whom the prisoner was tried, the prisoner himself and his daughter, who sat beside him. When the time came for the sentence to be passed Sierra stood up to receive it, but was so weak that his daughter supported him.

"Jose Sierra," said the judge, "do you remember a man who once stopped at your hacienda and whom you endeavored to seduce from his allegiance to that government which now exists, but was then struggling for its existence?"

"I do."

"And do you remember having given him a choice between accepting an appointment under the Diaz government and a trial for treason, which meant death?"

"I do."

"But the man escaped. You remember that, too, don't you?"

"I do."

"You never knew how he managed to pass the guards you threw around your hacienda on every available route?"

"I did not."

"It would not have been best for you to know this, nor is it now, but the assistance your prisoner received at that time is of great importance to you now. Had it not been for that assistance another victim would have been added to the one for shooting whom you have just been adjudged guilty."

All this was a puzzle to those present except the prisoner and his daughter. The judge spoke with evident emotion. The prisoner seemed deeply moved. His daughter as the address proceeded wound her arms tighter about her father. There was an impressiveness to the scene that held the audience spellbound. When the judge began to speak every one thought that he was about to give another instance than the one before the court why the prisoner should suffer death. When he entered upon the last matter he mentioned all were thrown into a state of doubt as to what was coming.

"We are entering in Mexico," he continued, "upon a new age—an age ushered in for the civilized world by a former president of the United States at the close of the greatest rebellion the world has ever seen. For that insurrection not a drop of blood was spilled after the surrender. I have been given discretion by my government as to the punishment to be meted out for acts that occurred during a period when every man's hand was against every other man. It is not meet in this age, when universal peace is dawning for the world, that Mexico should remain in barbarism. The acts of the troublous times through which we have recently moved belong to a dead past and should be buried with that past. The act of which you have been found guilty was repeated again and again on both sides. That the revolution has triumphed is no cause for committing in the name of justice acts of revenge.

"The finding of the jury is set aside. You are at liberty to go free."

By his address the judge attempted to prepare the feelings of those present for what had neither been expected nor desired. But the temper of the people was vengeful and had for ages been used to a different principle. A few applauded, but the majority grumbled. There were those present who had suffered at the hands of the man to whom this magnanimous treatment had been accorded. They had brought the accusation that they might be revenged—might revenge the dead they loved. They rebelled against the decision. Cries of "Hang him!" "Shoot him!" "Use the machete!" were heard, and a movement was made by the most active toward the prisoner. The judge arose and, raising his hand, enjoined silence.

"In striking this man," he said, "you strike the girl who loves him."

"He struck those we loved!" some one cried.

"Let me tell you one thing more, that which I spoke of, but did not speak. You remember that I mentioned the escape of one whom the prisoner would have sacrificed. I am that person."

A silence followed this announcement. That the judge had set aside a sentence of death upon the man who had intended to take his life filled those present with wonder. He had secured their attention. He went a step further.

"I will tell you how I escaped. I owe my life to that girl," pointing "She it was who gave me a disguise and drove me through her father's guards, risking her life for mine. Had it been discovered that the person sitting beside her was the rebel they were watching for she would have doubtless been sacrificed. If you strike him you strike her, and through her you strike me, who have done my part to establish the government under which we now hope for peace and prosperity."

The crisis had come and turned in favor of the judge. Those who had opposed his decision stood looking sullenly on, while the others were won over by his magnanimity and by sympathy for the girl who had saved his life. The advocates of taking the law into their own hands began to move away muttering, leaving only those who had been converted to the cause of mercy. Those most sympathetic gathered about the girl, whether for her protection or in sympathy. Then gradually the crowd melted away and left the three principal participants in the drama.

Concia went to the judge, took his hand in hers and kissed it. Her father stood with folded arms looking at vacancy. A short time before he had been expecting death. He was now conscious only that his life had been spared and he feared nothing.

There is a sequel to this story, but this is not the place for it. Indeed, the events narrated happened too recently for it to be a finished romance. One thing is certain. This renouncing of vengeance was brought about by love.

WITHOUT RESPECT

But With Respect It Was a Different Matter

There is a house still standing in South Carolina, one of those old fashioned but stately mansions, that is more than 150 years old. The woodwork above its cornices, its massive chimneys, its fluted pillars extending from the porch to the roof, smack of aristocratic persons who dwell there when the place was new, but who dwell there no longer.

When the Revolution came on Charles Ringold, then lord of the manor, remained loyal to the king, but his children, all of whom were grown, chose the patriot side. His two sons were with General Marion, the "Swamp Fox." His only daughter, Margaret, remained at home with her father, though her heart was with her brothers in the continental service.

One evening during that troublous period Margaret, looking out of a window, saw a man in a scarlet coat riding toward the house. Going out on to the porch, she stood there between two of the great white pillars waiting for him. When he drew rein before her and doffed his hat politely she saw that he was what a woman would naturally admire, a gentleman, a soldier and handsome. He came of the same aristocratic English stock from which she herself had sprung.

"May I ask," he said, "are you loyal subjects of the king here, or are you rebels?"

"My father is for the king" was the reply.

"And you?"

"It doesn't matter where my sympathy lies, for I am a woman, but were I a man I would now be fighting for the patriot cause."

"May I see your father?"

"Certainly."

The officer dismounted. The girl called a negro servant to hold his horse, then showed the man into the library, where her father was reading, and left the two together. Captain Arbuckle, one of Colonel Tarleton's officers, had been sent out by his chief to make inquiries among such Tories as he could find in the neighborhood as to where the "Swamp Fox" was lurking. He asked Mr. Ringold for information, but the latter frankly told him that though he was loyal to the British cause he had two sons in Marion's corps and begged to be excused from replying to his questions. But since darkness was coming on he offered the captain entertainment for the night.

Arbuckle accepted the invitation, not for the entertainment, but that he might pass an evening in company with Margaret, whose stately figure, comely face and aristocratic bearing had made a profound impression upon him. Women to young English bloods of that day were considered legitimate game, and Arbuckle vowed within himself that before he parted with the girl for the night he would take at least one kiss.

He kept his resolution, though he no more than kept it, for he got but one kiss. He left a crimson spot where his lips touched Margaret's cheek and fire in her eye. Rising, she swept out of the room, leaving him discomfited. He had not expected such a rebuff from a woman dwelling in this wild country, so far from old England. He was in doubt whether to regret his act or to make an excuse to remain, with a view to a further effort. But for the present there was nothing to do but to go to bed.

In the morning he breakfasted with Mr. Ringold, and when the meal was finished, feeling obliged to return to duty, he ordered his horse. The negro who brought it handed him a note from Margaret, in which she told him that a champion demanded satisfaction for the insult he had offered her the evening before. Captain Arbuckle was astonished. He had played the same game many a time at home, with no serious consequences, to meet with a challenge to mortal combat on a like provocation in the wilds of America.

But for one thing the officer would have offered a humble apology. That was the champion. A spirit of rivalry took possession of him. Who was this man who was to stand in defense of the woman who had so impressed him? Was he a lover, a brother or a friend? In any event, could he, an Englishman—the proudest race on earth—apologize for taking a liberty with one born in a land recently acquired from savages?

"Tell your mistress," he said to the negro, "that I will communicate with her as soon as my duties as a soldier will permit."

On his return to camp Arbuckle found that the command had got wind of the "Swamp Fox" and had gone in chase of him. Tarleton had left an order for the captain to remain in the camp in command of a small guard. This left him an opportunity to take rare of the matter he had in hand. He wrote Margaret that since he had learned that she had a champion the fight must come off before any apology could be made. He was impatient to throw himself at her feet to implore her pardon; therefore he desired the affair should be settled as soon as possible. Besides, he was now free from any duty that would interfere with its settlement. Would she ask her champion to name an early date, place, weapons and other details?

A reply came that she felt a delicacy in the identity of the man who was to defend her being known; therefore she stipulated that he should fight masked. The time would be that evening at sunset, in a clearing back of her father's house, the weapons to be cavalry swords. There were to be no seconds. Her slave, Jim, who bore her messages, would be present as a witness.

To the masking Arbuckle declined to assent unless assured that her champion was not a blood relative, and when thus assured he agreed to be on hand at the appointed hour.

He found his enemy waiting for him. The man was tall and slender, being dressed in citizen's costume of the day, a broad tailed cutaway coat and breeches, buff waistcoat, white stockings, large shoe buckles and a powdered peruke. His mask was of black velvet, with lace at and below his mouth.

Jim, the colored slave, stood near with a saber under an arm and a small box containing articles to stop the flow of blood in the other. He handed Arbuckle a saber, and the latter advanced to the spot where his enemy was standing. But before putting himself in a posture for defense he said to Jim:

"In case I am denied an opportunity to crave your mistress' pardon by being killed in this fight I desire you to assure her that had I lived I would have done so."

"I'll do dat, sah," said Jim, "fo' I reckon yo' gwine fo' to get killed. De man wid de udder sword mighty fine fencer. He killed!"

A suppressed exclamation of dissatisfaction from the champion stopped this attempt to frighten the captain, and the principals in the affair, advancing toward each other, began to fence. Notwithstanding Jim's encomiums the unknown at once proved himself no match for his opponent. Arbuckle, perceiving this, stood strictly on the defensive, not desiring that blood should be spilled in such a cause.

He was beginning to be amused at the bungling thrusts and parries made by his opponent when an accident happened at an unlucky moment. Just as the masked man was making one of his awkward thrusts Arbuckle's foot caught in a creeping vine, and he fell forward on the point of his adversary's sword, which, entering his right side just below the arm pit, inflicted a flesh wound.

A cry came from the champion. Not a masculine cry; it was like a woman's shriek. Throwing away his saber, he stooped and lifted his enemy in his arms. Arbuckle, more interested in the champion's identity than his wound, pulled off the mask and exposed the features of Margaret Ringold.

The two looked at each other for a few moments without speaking; then Arbuckle, seizing Margaret's hand, kissed it respectfully, exclaiming:

"Forgive me!"

Meanwhile Jim was hurrying forward, opening the box of materials for staunching blood. Arbuckle assured Margaret that his wound was of no importance, threw off his coat, opened his waistcoat and exposed his shirt saturated with blood. Margaret tremblingly applied lint and wound a bandage to hold it in its place. Then she told Jim to go for assistance and bring a conveyance to take the wounded man to the house. But Arbuckle demurred.

"The affair must be kept secret," he said, "because I am ashamed of my part in requiring a woman to protect herself against me, and, as for being carried about with such a pin prick as this, my comrades would despise me. Go to your home, Miss Ringold. You have vanquished me in more ways than one. Henceforth I am your champion whenever you choose to have me by accepting my services. I will now ride to camp, but ask that at the first opportunity I may be permitted to pay my duty to you."

Margaret turned and walked away, but she heard footsteps behind her and felt her hand clasped. It was Arbuckle.

"Tell me before we part," he said, "am I forgiven?"

She made no reply except with her eyes, but the man was satisfied. He watched her, attended by Jim, till she reached the house, when she turned and, putting her fingers to her lips, threw him what she had fought him for taking disrespectfully.

The "Swamp Fox" kept Tarleton and his men busy for some time, during which Arbuckle did not appear at the Ringold manor. Then he was taken ill. From a hospital he sent word to Margaret that as soon as he had recovered he would see her and make all possible amends for his treatment of her. But he was obliged to wait till the war had ended before being able to visit her. When he came he asked to see her father, saying that he had called on a matter of vital importance to himself. He asked to be permitted to pay his addresses to his daughter. The old Tory was much pleased at the request, though he felt that it would separate him from his child and, having granted it, informed Margaret that Arbuckle had come and had asked for her hand.

There was a great contrast between this and the first meeting Margaret had with Captain Arbuckle, which gave a peculiar zest to the latter. The couple were married before Captain Arbuckle returned with the British forces in America to England. There the South Carolinian was welcomed by her husband's relatives, and she at once assumed a prominent position in society. But she always maintained that had not the colonies won their independence she would not have left her American home.

Lesson XIII.—Third Quarter, For Sept. 24, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Dan. vi, 10-23. Memory Verses, 21-23—Golden Text, Pa. xxxiv, 7—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

These historical lessons from the book of Daniel are most fascinating and most practically helpful, inasmuch as the God of Daniel and his friends is none other than our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the same yesterday, today and forever and always ready to hold strongly with all whose hearts are wholly for Him, not keeping us from trials, but manifesting His presence with us in the trial and bringing us through to His glory. Men and women who believe God were never more needed than now.

Oh, for a testimony such as was given concerning Daniel, even by his enemies! We shall not find any occasion against him, except we find it concerning the law of his God (verses 4, 5). Knowing something of his habit of prayer, they asked the king to sign a decree that no one should ask a petition of any god or man save Darius for thirty days under penalty of being cast to the lions.

Although Daniel knew the decree had been signed, he kept on as of old time, kneeling upon his knees in prayer three times a day, with his windows open toward Jerusalem, remembering I Kings viii, 47-49. His enemies did not need to watch long in order to catch him in their net, and the king was promptly informed that "that Daniel of the captivity of Judah regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed" (verse 13). If the king had not before seen the design of his presidents and princes against Daniel he saw it now and was sore displeased, not with Daniel, but with himself that he had not seen through this plot before signing the decree.

He labored in vain to deliver his prime minister, whom he evidently esteemed and loved, but even the law of God, which is holy and just and good, cannot save any one, much less this law of the Medes and Persians, which was only a great iniquity. Our deliverance from the condemnation of the holy law of God is accomplished only by a sinless person taking the place of the guilty and suffering in our stead (I Cor. v, 21; Rom. iii, 19-24; x, 4).

We do not read that Darius so loved Daniel that he gave himself for him and went to the den of lions in his stead, but we do read just that virtually of Jesus Christ (I Pet. ii, 24; Gal. ii, 20, 1 c.). Daniel was cast to the lions (probably not very gently), a stone laid upon the mouth of the den and sealed with the signet of the king and his lords. Imagine the rejoicing on the part of his enemies because they were now rid of him, and no doubt they ridiculed the God of Daniel who could not deliver him from the lions nor from their power.

After a night of sleeplessness and fasting very early in the morning the king is found at the den of lions calling aloud to Daniel if perchance he may still be alive. Surely Darius must have learned something of the power of Daniel's God to be able to imagine such a thing possible and to encourage him as he did on his way to the den. With what joy and gratitude the king must have heard the voice of Daniel and the words, "My God hath sent His angel and hath shut the lions' mouths that they have not hurt me" (22).

So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him because he believed in his God (23).

Thus shall it be in the morning of the first resurrection. No matter what the saints have suffered here in their mortal bodies, the resurrection body will be perfect, for we shall be like Him (I John iii, 2). The accusers of Daniel were then cast into the den of lions, with their wives and children, and there was no deliverance for them.

As to the righteous and the wicked, we read in Ps. xlix, 14, that the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning. Study the morning deliverances of Scripture, but note that there will be no morning for the enemies of God (Isa. viii, 20, R. V.). In verses 25 to 27 see how by a worldwide decree the living God, the God of Daniel, was magnified. How telling are the words in verse 28, "So this Daniel prospered," and according to the last sentence in his book we shall find him in his appointed place in the kingdom—that kingdom under the whole heaven which is to be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, when all dominions shall serve and obey Him (Dan. vii, 27). That will be after or in connection with the overthrow of all the kingdoms of this world, as set forth in Dan. ii, and vii. The great self exalting, God defying, antichrist shall come to his end, and none shall help him (Dan. xi, 36-38, 45).

Then shall "the stone" without human aid break in pieces the world powers and fill the earth with a kingdom of peace and righteousness, and the enemies of the Lord shall perish as truly as did Daniel's enemies (Dan. ii, 34, 35-44; vii, 9-14; II Thess. i, 7-10). The Messiah has been cut off without receiving His kingdom, but at the end of the seventeenth week everlasting righteousness shall be the portion of Daniel's people (Dan. ix, 24-27; Isa. li, 21; xxxiii, 1-17; Jer. xliii, 5, 6).

Springfield, Mass., September 17.—Pastor Russell delivered two addresses here today under the auspices of the International Bible Students' Association, Local Branch. We report the one in which he discussed the permission of evil by the Almighty. He took no particular text although, as usual, he quoted from the Bible freely throughout his discourse. He said in part:

The question of the Ages is, Why did the Almighty, originally, permit Evil—Sin? And why has an Omnipotent Ruler such as He, for more than sixty centuries, permitted Satan to continue his reign of sin and death? Leaving out entirely the unscriptural theory so prevalent, respecting a purgatory of centuries, or a torment everlasting, and considering merely the trials, sufferings, sorrow and pain of humanity during the present life, how shall we account for their permission by an All-Powerful Creator, who knew the end from the beginning?

Why does He permit injustice, unrighteousness, headaches, heartaches, etc.? Why does He not deal with humanity graciously, kindly, lovingly, as a Father—as He deals with the angelic sons of God? Is it just or loving on the part of our Creator to bring forth millions of his creatures under these admittedly unfavorable conditions—beset by weaknesses and sinwardness from their birth and surrounded by others similarly weak, and beset by Satan and his minions—wicked spirits? Is it just that we should thus be in an unequal fight subjected to weaknesses and dying and imperfect conditions on account of the sin of our first parents and then, on the same account, be in danger of an eternity of torture with nine hundred and ninety-nine chances out of a thousand against us?

Our question is surely too deep for any human philosophy, and those who reject the Bible as of Divine inspiration may as well abandon all hope of an answer. God Himself, and none other, could tell us of His own secrets—why He did as He did. Truly we read, "The secret of the Lord is with them that reverence Him; and He will show them His Covenant" (Ps. xiv, 4).

The light now shining upon the Word of God shows us that the Divine purpose in connection with mankind is a progressive one, embracing Ages and Dispensations. If we ignore these, we are thereby blinded to the true answer to our question. Accepting these, it is the privilege of Bible students today to see the light in God's Word—to see matters from the Divine standpoint, to understand the "Mystery of God, hidden from Ages and from generations, and now made known unto His saints," namely, that in the Ages to come, all the trials and difficulties, all the sorrows and tears of the past, will be more than compensated for, and proved to be a part of the great Divine Program which will work out to the glory of God and the enlightenment and blessing of angels and men.

Man's Primary Lesson

First of all, God chooses to have children possessed of a quality like His own—freedom of will. He therefore not only created man perfect in mind and body, but He gave to him a will, the power of choice—liberty to choose one course or another. God foresaw that giving man this liberty of will would lead to the seduction of Mother Eve, and to the disobedience of Father Adam, through his love for

HIDDEN DANGERS

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Bedford Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the approach of dropsy. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here is proof in the statement of a nearby resident.

Ira Eshelman, New Enterprise, Pa., says: "I believe that a strain caused by heavy lifting brought on my kidney trouble. I suffered much from a weak back and also had pains in my side. I heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I finally got a supply and began their use. They helped me from the first and before long I was in much better health. Doan's Kidney Pills will always have my endorsement."

his wife. Adam's preference was to die with her rather than to live in harmony with God without her; for if he should disobey he would come under the sentence of death. Although Adam and the angels were perfect, they had not a perfect knowledge of their Creator, of His Love, His Wisdom, His Justice, His Power.

God, therefore, without interfering with Adam's liberty, permitted the great calamity of death to come upon him and his race. From the very beginning God premeditated the entire Plan of Salvation, as He has since been working it out; and He will completely accomplish the same ultimately through Messiah's Kingdom. The great lesson which will eventually come both to angels and men will show forth Divine Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power, fully co-ordinated. In no other way that we can imagine could this great Revelation of the Divine character be so well made. However, in order to comprehend this great Program, it is necessary that we follow strictly the Scriptural teachings, and avoid wholly the nonsense of our creeds, manufactured during the Dark Ages. We must see that "the wages of sin" is not eternal torment, nor purgatory, but death.

God allowed this reign of sin and death from Adam until Moses without so much as making an offer of terms of reconciliation and peace. Then an offer was made to the nation of Israel, and to no other nation. The offer of Israel's Law Covenant was, "He that doeth these things shall live." God, of course, knew that Israel could not keep perfectly the condition of that great and wonderful Law. The offer served as a lesson to that nation respecting the impossibility of any man's keeping the perfect Law; and the same lesson comes to us of this Gospel Dispensation. We see that what the Jew could not do we cannot do; where he failed we would fail.

Thus through the Law Covenant God taught a great lesson to Israel and to the Church; and He will ultimately teach the same lesson to the world and to angels—proving that by the deeds of the Law no fallen flesh could be recovered and re-instated in Divine favor. Four thousand years passed from man's creation, and death reigned from Moses to Christ as thoroughly as it had previously reigned from Adam to Moses. The Law Covenant did not stop the reign of sin and death. Something more than a Law is necessary. The Divine Program demands recovery from sin and death, and the Divine Program purposes this recovery.

Nearly nineteen centuries have passed since the first advent of our Lord, and still the reign of sin and death is in progress more than ever. The increase of knowledge has brought increase of sin; increase of population has brought increase of death; until today the world is in a terrible condition of mental, moral and physical dilapidation, and ninety thousand go into the tomb every twenty-four hours.

But a Remedy is in sight. It was foretold through the Prophets, but it began to operate in Jesus. His miraculous birth, His faithfulness and consecration unto death, His reward of resurrection and exaltation to the right hand of the Majesty on High, are all essential to man's recovery—essential to the overthrow of this reign of sin and death over our race.

We see still further developments and preparations. The Scriptures inform us that it is the Divine purpose to have a multitudinous Messiah, of which the glorious Jesus is the Head and the Church the Body.

We perceive that God for nearly nineteen centuries has been calling and drawing a special class of mankind to constitute His Elect, the Bride Class, to be joint-heirs with His Son in the Kingdom of Glory which will finally vanquish sin and Satan and deliver the willing and obedient of mankind into the full liberty of the children of God—freedom from sin and death, and into the enjoyment of life everlasting and Divine favor.

The Dark and Narrow Path

The special class is required to walk by faith and not by sight—to walk in the "narrow way" of self-denial and opposition to the world, the flesh and the Adversary, in the footsteps of Jesus. Ignorance, selfishness, sin, death, all go to make up the deplorable conditions in the world and to constitute the way a narrow one in which this Elect class is required to walk, in order to demonstrate their full loyalty and obedience to the will of God—even unto death. Evidently, no such narrow way could have existed had God not permitted evil—sin. Evidently, therefore, this Elect class could not be developed and tested except by the Divine permission of sin. The very essence of their character-development is associated with the Divine promise that "all things shall work for good to those who love God," to the called ones according to His purpose.

It seemed wise to our Heavenly Father that our Lord Jesus should learn obedience through sufferings and be tested in respect to His willingness to endure suffering for righteousness' sake. How appropriate it is that the same Father should make similar arrangements for all of the Church, whom He will receive from amongst the race of Adam to be members of the Royal Priesthood under Jesus, the High Priest of our order.

We see a necessity for this, not only as respects our own testings and a thorough proof of our own heart-loyalty to the Lord, but additionally we see a wisdom on God's part in thus preparing a priesthood of the future. A priest, as recognized

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

I learned of Foley Kidney Pills and their wonderful cures so I began taking them and sure enough I had as good results as any I heard about. My backache left me and to one of my business, expressive man, that alone is a great advantage. My kidneys acted free and normal, and that saved me a lot of misery. It is now a pleasure to work where it used to be a misery. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me and have my highest praise." Ed. D. Heckerman.

amongst the Jews, was not merely one who offered sacrifices, although every priest was of necessity a sacrificer. The special mission of the priestly tribe amongst the other tribes was that of instructing, helping, teaching. And so God is preparing a Royal Priesthood for the Messianic Age to bless, to heal, to teach, to uplift all the willing and obedient.

The royalty of the priesthood signifies that it will no longer be a sacrificing class, for all sacrificing will be at an end. It will be a glorious class, royal, of the divine nature, and representatives with our Lord Jesus of the Divine power. As priests who will have to do with judging and chastening, healing and helping humanity, how much sympathy do we suppose that these Royal Priests should have? Are they not to be on the Divine plane of glory, "members of the Body" of Messiah?

Sin's Lesson to Humanity

Humanity is learning a great lesson through the permission of sin. Present experiences teach the lesson that "the way of the transgressor is hard," "The wages of sin is death," "The soul that sinneth it shall die." The exceeding sinfulness of sin is thus being demonstrated to humanity. Few profit by the lesson in the present life, and these are chiefly such as are called to the heavenly calling. The great majority of mankind learn to know sin, evil, only. Even God's provision for the future of mankind is obscured from the masses. "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of God's goodness should shine into their hearts."

But with the dawning of the New Dispensation of Messiah's Kingdom, the true light of the knowledge of the glory of God's character will shine everywhere. "All the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped." Messiah's gracious reign, the manifestation of Divine mercy, will be for the very purpose of uplifting these poor, fallen members of our race—the masses. During the thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom, the whole world will have full opportunity for learning the great desirability of righteousness, as now, for a few years, they have the opportunity of learning the undesirability of sin.

By the close of the Mediatorial reign what wonderful lessons respecting God and evil mankind will have learned. Then will come their final testing. After full knowledge of both good and evil, which will they choose? God urges all to choose the right and its reward of life eternal. Nevertheless, He will not coerce; He will allow each individual to take his choice, to mark out his own course, whether in harmony with or contrary to the Divine arrangements. Such, however, as come to the point of loving righteousness and hating iniquity, shall be accounted worthy of a place in the glorious Kingdom of Messiah.

The Lesson to the Angels
God's dealings with humanity constitute a great object lesson to the angels. They perceive the inflexibility of Divine Justice—the decree of God. "Dying thou shalt die" has been unflinchingly executed against Adam and his race for six thousand years. They perceived, further, the love of God, which passeth all understanding. They perceive the Divine provision that the Son of God should die, the Just for the unjust, to bring mankind back to full harmony with the Creator. They see the breadth of the Divine character exemplified in the great reward given to our Lord Jesus Christ for His obedience to the Father's will, even unto death—an exaltation to the divine nature, honor and immortality.

They perceive, too, a still greater manifestation of Divine goodness, in God's invitation to the Church to become joint-heirs with Christ in His glory, honor and immortality, on conditions of obedience and walking in the Master's footsteps to the extent of their ability. Who could have dreamed of such "Love Divine, all love excelling," which stooped down, not only to redeem the race, but also to invite some of the members thereof to these exceeding great and precious things which "God hath in reservation for them that love Him."

Next in order the world will receive Divine mercy, extended through Jesus, by the Father's arrangement, to Adam and every member of his race, no matter how degraded, no matter how fallen, no matter how mean. The redeeming blood has been shed, "The Just for the unjust," for the sins of the whole world.

Divine Power and Wisdom
While Divine power is manifested in all the realms of nature and creation, a still greater Divine Power was manifested in the resurrection of our Lord Jesus from the dead, after He had been deceased three days. But even the power manifested in our Lord's resurrection seems small in comparison to the further works of resurrection which the Scriptures assure us our dear Lord's death insures. It will be a still more miraculous work to resurrect the Church to glory, honor and immortality, after many of them have been in the power of death for centuries.

And still more stupendous is the resurrection work which God proposes for the world of mankind—thousands of millions to be awakened, and restored to the same conditions they formerly enjoyed—conditions, however, of imperfection, from which they will be gradually released and uplifted by Messiah.

This resurrection work for the world, which will be gradually carried forward during that thousand years, will all be accomplished by the Father's power, through the Messiah, the Mediator of the New Covenant. It will be a continuous miracle of awakening and uplifting the race.

Divine Wisdom Yet to Be Seen

Not until the close of the reign of Messiah and the complete uplift from sin and death of all of Adam's race willing to return to Divine favor, will the Wisdom of God be manifested in its full, clear light. Already some may see, partially, obscurely, some of God's Wisdom, but the majority are still inquiring, Why was evil permitted? These have not yet seen the Divine Wisdom in connection with the permission of evil. Ultimately this shall be clearly seen—by the saints, by the angels and by the world of mankind. Well does the Revelator exclaim:

"Who shall not glorify Thee, O Lord! when Thy righteous dealings are made manifest!" "All nations which Thou hast made shall come and worship before Thee!" (Revelation xv, 4). As now, "Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge, and there is no place where the voice is not heard"—the voice of Nature, acclaiming her God—so, eventually, "Every creature in heaven and earth and under the earth shall be heard saying: 'Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb forever.'" All this will be the result of God's permission of sin—of His permission of the reign of evil, sin, death. The key is found in the Plan of the Ages—showing the work which each Age is to accomplish, and the grand climax, eventually, of evil.

La Follette's First Great Fight

In "The Autobiography of an Insurgent," by United States Senator Robert M. La Follette, in the October American Magazine, the great Insurgent tells of his campaign for the district attorneyship, just after he graduated from college:

"To an impecunious young lawyer almost without clients, the district attorneyship of Dane County, paying at that time the munificent salary of $800 a year with an allowance of $50 for expenses, seemed like a golden opportunity. Though it appeared immeasurably difficult of attainment, I determined to make for it with all my strength. What I wanted was an opportunity to work—to practice my profession—and to make a living. I knew that trial work would appeal to me, and I believed I could try criminal cases successfully."

"I had an old horse which I had used during my university course in riding out to a district school I had taught to aid in paying my way, and borrowing a buggy and harness from Bill Miner, a friend and supported, I now began driving through the country and talking with the farmers about my candidacy."

"It was harvest time, and I remember how I often tied my horse, climbed the fences, and found the farmer and his men in the fields."

"'Ain't you over-young?' was the objection chiefly raised."

Dust and Tuberculosis

What shall we say of the careless men and women, who deliberately eject into the public streets, highways, and conveyances, sputum that may contain billions of germs, which when they are dried, shall join the Kingdom of Dust, as the right hand of death? Were a man to run amuck through the crowded streets of our cities, stabbing and shooting, right and left, what would be done with him? In self-defense, one would shoot him down as though he were a beast of prey. And yet, he would be comparatively harmless, as he could wound or kill only a few people before he would be stopped. Yet we permit the well dressed gentleman or lady, educated and apparently refined, to expectorate upon the streets, although we know, absolutely know, that their sputa might and probably will cause hundreds of thousands of deaths. Such unfortunates are infinitely more dangerous to the welfare of mankind than the poor madman who runs amuck, and is shot down as a beast.

If we are to fight the great white plague, it must be through the means given to us by science. We know the cause. We know how to stamp it out. Stringent laws concerning expectoration and the disposal of excreta should be passed by every law-making body in the world, and the people made to save themselves from the terrible, frightful punishment inflicted upon them by the bacillus tuberculosis the grewsome right hand of death—From "The Kingdom of Dust," by J. Gordon Ogden in the October Mechanics Magazine.

HANDLING APPLE CROP

Prof. H. A. Surface Tells How to Pick, Grade and Pack the Fruit.
Now that the time for picking the apple crop is near at hand, Prof. H. A. Surface, Economical Zoologist of Pennsylvania, is mailing the following in brief directions to the owners of State Model Orchards, telling them how to pick, grade and pack their fruit so as to realize the greatest returns for their efforts in growing fancy fruit:

Picking

All fruit should be most carefully hand picked when fully grown, and red varieties well colored. Too early picking sacrifices high quality, and color, and also the fruit spurs, while too late reduces the keeping qualities. The exact time of picking can be determined by the full development of the fruit, and an occasional specimen beginning to soften or show the yellow colors, or drop from the tree. In picking, the apple should be grasped in such a manner that the forefinger touches the stem, and then by a rolling and bending movement the apple will be unjointed at the fruit spur. Careless and hurried picking often destroys the fruit spur or pulls out the stem, breaking the skin at the basin and otherwise bruising it. Injured fruit will not keep so well, and its value is thus reduced.

A padded half bushel basket with a swing handle is the best receptacle into which to pick the fruit. Leaving apples lie in piles, with the hot sun beating upon them, reduces their keeping qualities. Instead they should be immediately cooled after picking, especially during warm weather.

Grading

To aid in assorting apples to uniform sizes for boxing, a sizing board with a row of holes will be helpful. These holes should be about 2 3/4 in. to 3 1/2 in. in diameter, representing the different sized apples that are put into boxes. The grader will soon become able to dispense with the sizing board except when in doubt. The apples are held up to the hole, but never dropped through. An ordinary table covered with a layer of canvas or soft cloth can be used on which to spread the apples in grading. Winter varieties can be assorted into four grades:

1st. The finest for boxes: This should consist of well colored and finest fruit of high quality varieties, free from blemishes, and of fine finish and uniform size.

2nd. First grade for barrels: Next sizes to box apples, free from blemishes and bruises, and of uniform size throughout the barrel.

3rd. Second grade for barrels: Second grade includes the smaller sizes of sound fruit free from blemishes.

4th. Culls: These include all the rest of the fruit, and usually should not be sent to market to compete with the better grades, but used for evaporating, canning and cider.

Box Packing

The art of packing apples in boxes is not easily described in writing, but must be learned by teaching and practice. The object is to adapt the styles of arrangement of the apples according to size so that the box is filled, the fruit projecting slightly above the top of the box at the ends, and about an inch in the middle. When the ends are nailed the bulge in the middle is distributed between the top and bottom.

is 10 1/2 x 11 1/2 x 18 inches; the California special box 10 x 11 x 20 inches, all inside measurement. The ends are made of boards 3/4 in. thick, the sides 3/8 in., and the top and bottom 1/2 in. There are cleats on the ends of the tops and bottoms.

Styles of Packing

I. Four layers of 6 rows of four apples each, 96 apples in the box.

II. Four layers of 8 rows of four apples each, 128 apples in the box.

III. Five layers of 7 rows of five apples each, 175 apples in the box.

IV. Five layers of 10 rows of five apples each, 250 apples in the box.

V. Three apples in the first row, two in the second, and three and two alternating to complete the tier. The second tier starts with two apples in the first row, placed in the intervals of the three of the bottom row, three in the second, etc. The third tier is like the first. 213 apples in the box.

VI. In this style of packing three apples in each row alternate with the adjoining row. Each tier alternates with the tier below, so that the apples in the third tier are directly above those of the first, and those of the fourth tier above the second. 72 apples fill the box.

Barrel Packing

The standard American barrel contains three bushels, and measures 17 1/4 in across the ends, 23 1/2 in. across the center, and has staves 28 1/2 in long. Second hand sugar barrels and smaller or "snide barrels" shall not be used.

Take out the bottom head, and stand the barrel with top head down so as to pack the top end first. A corrugated paper or some other cushion to protect the head layer should be laid in position, and on this layer a fancy paper cap. Pack the layer of "facers" stem ends down in circular rows, fitting tightly together. A second layer of apples of the same kind is similarly placed in the depressions of the first. The facers are the same grade as the rest of the apples in the barrel, but are of the best colored. Over the facers pour gently a half bushel of apples at a time, shaking the barrel to settle the fruit. Fill the barrel to just above the ends of the staves, facing the top layer stem ends up, covering with a padded head to prevent crushing. Press down and drive the hoops into place and nail the head in.

MITCHELL'S LETTERS

To Appear in the Sunday North American.

The Sunday North American has arranged to publish a series of twelve articles by John Mitchell on important phases of present-day industrial conditions. One will appear each week, beginning next Sunday, September 24.

No man in the country is better fitted by experience and temperament to discuss the vital issues which affect the wage earner and industry. He has earned the confidence of his fellow-workers, the respect of employers and the admiration of the great public. His integrity is unquestioned; his grasp of these big questions unequalled. And he writes with a direct simplicity that gives vigor to his views. Every worker—every citizen, indeed, who is concerned in the problems of the day—should follow this series in the Sunday North American. Following are some of the subjects to be treated:

The Wage Earners and the Trusts.
The Wage Earners and the Judiciary.
The Wage Earners and Labor Organizations.

The Wage Earners and Occupation-
